

Many Important Matters at Sessions of Two Houses Yesterday

can be done in one of two ways—by reducing the number equally in all dioceses or by making the number of deputies from each diocese depend on the number of communicants or clergy-men in the diocese. It is not probable that either will be done at this con- vention, certainly the latter will be de- ferred by the smaller dioceses, though there is something to say on each side. The probable outcome of the discussion on this matter will be a renewal of the movement toward the creation of provinces.

Change of Name.
From Honolulu comes a memorial opening again the old question of the change of the name of the church. It is hardly possible that this will even provoke any serious discussion at this time, as it was so thoroughly threshed out at Boston after having been re- ferred to the different dioceses and their replies considered. It will be some time before this question will awaken much discussion, for the personnel of the convention is too much the same as that at Boston, and its changes are never very great.

There were three memorials pre- sented of really great importance, two dealing with the Bible, the other with the hymn book. At every convention memorials are presented, asking per- mission to use the Revised Version of the Bible in the church services, and several similar memorials appeared yesterday. It is very evident that the time is not far off when this permis- sion will be given, for the demands come too frequently and too persistently to be long refused. The idea is that by the use of the Revised Ver- sion in the churches the laity can get nearer to the original and have a better opportunity to obtain the exact truth which the Bible contains.

Other Changes.
Another and much-needed change is petitioned by several dioceses. That is such a revision of the lectionary and provisions for the manner in which the Bible shall be read in churches that greater liberty be given to the clergymen in the selection of the lessons read, and that certain portions may be changed for others more calculated to edify the hearers, both of which are sorely needed, and this can be done at this session of the General Convention, for the constitu- tion provides that the tables of les- sons may be amended by the concur- rent vote of the two houses at any con- vention.

There is also a movement on foot to provide a church hymnal suitable for rescue missions, mission Sunday- schools and home use. Such a book to contain words and tunes suitable for these purposes, hymns that do not require a professional choir, and which trained choir to sing them. An- other feature is that it shall be pub- lished in such a form that it can be bought by the poorest of families and sold in every home, and that it may move, for, as a deputy from Chicago remarked: "A singing church is a win- ning church." When we become jubil- ant we shall win souls for Christ, and this will be the right kind of music to put into the people's hearts.

An important report was that of the committee appointed at the last Gen- eral Convention to fix the meaning of the word "communicant" as used in connection with the making of par- ocial reports. Such a definition of the significance of the term is absolutely necessary. If any reliable statistics of the state of the church are to be put forth at present, there is absolutely no uniformity exist- ing, and the present numbers of communicants given do not by any means indicate the true number. It is to be sincerely hoped that this con- vention will give the term some defi- nite and fixed meaning. It would be a very simple and easy matter to set- tle, for no matter what interpreta- tion was given to the word, it would at least be a meeting of the minds.

Fund for Clergy.
The memorial of Los Angeles look- ing toward the raising of a fund of at least $5,000,000 as a permanent fund, the income of which is to be used for pen- sioning the clergy and ministering to the needs of aged and infirm clergy, and of the widows and orphans of de- ceased clergy, is certainly a move in the right direction, and one that is occupying the minds of all good churchmen. There is a fund now exist- ing, and increasing yearly, though not as rapidly as it should increase. There will doubtless be some interest- ing facts revealed when this memo- rial comes up for consideration, and there is no doubt that the church will respond with a loving generosity to the appeal for the care of her veteran soldiers, who have given all the strength and powers of their best days to her work.

Signs of growth in the church were very evident when memorials were pre- sented for the division of the Diocese of Georgia into two dioceses and the dividing the Diocese of Oregon, setting apart the eastern portion for a mis- sionary district in both of these; more episcopal ministrations is needed as the church's influence extends. It has been proven by the experience of the greater and more efficient work can be done in small dioceses territorially than in larger ones, and each convention is memorialized to authorize the erection of some new dioceses.

Season of Prayer.

Another and gratifying indication of growth in the church is the memo- rial asking that the missionary dis- trict of Duluth, created in 1885, be now received as a diocese, since it is now self-supporting and no longer needs assistance from the general mission- ary fund. Just before the hour of adjourn- ment a message came from the men who compose the Brotherhood of St. An- drew, through the House of Bishops, asking that every year a week be set aside as a season of prayer in order to hasten the coming of Christ's kingdom on earth. This is a matter of no small significance. The great gather- ing in Washington last week, from which this message came, witnesses to the work done by the church among men and this message coming from that body, which is a body of organ- ization, tells of the spiritual earnest- ness which lies at the bottom of their work.

And then, just as the day's business was finished, word came of the glorious offering of self-sacrifice and devotion made by the Women's Auxiliary, and none know all the real sacrifice that offering means. Some began to ap- plaud with mere clapping of hands, but that was far too feeble to ex- press the feeling of the house. There was a higher emotion moving the men to be proud of the deed of the de- vout women, and the present numbers of communicants given do not by any means indicate the true number. It is to be sincerely hoped that this con- vention will give the term some defi- nite and fixed meaning. It would be a very simple and easy matter to set- tle, for no matter what interpreta- tion was given to the word, it would at least be a meeting of the minds.

members of one great spiritual com- munity, witnessing for Christ, each in its own country and side by side, and that what concerns you con- cerns us, and what you do here in con- vention has a world-wide influence in our communion and in its bearing on the life and the work of the rest of Christendom.

"I could not have come away from Jamaica at this time if it had not been for my deep sense of obligation to the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, my appreciation of its work as a lay or- ganization and my desire to keep in touch with its labors, as well as its members. I have found that organi- zation of the utmost benefit in de- veloping and directing lay work through our West Indian communities, and especially in Jamaica, so you will understand how I felt it a duty to break away and come to Washington for a brief period."

Great Needs There.
After again expressing the keen sense of pleasure which had been aroused by his visit, His Grace said: "But I must leave this convention and get back to my island home, for dear brethren, we have still great needs there—all of special account—resulting largely from our late disas- ter. It is an awful thing for a city to be destroyed—for the wealthy and the poor citizens alike to find them- selves homeless and penniless in a night."

The archbishop then gave a brief account of the terrible effects of the Kingston earthquake. As a result of the disaster it had been necessary to reconstruct sixty church buildings. Some were minor ones, and did not present difficulties. In the city of Kingston every important church was either leveled to the ground or had been so "scattered and bruised and injured" that later on careful inspec- tion showed that it was needful to pull it down.

The archbishop, in closing, said he did not see how this country could entertain the slightest doubt as to the suitability of the methods of the An- glican church to meet the needs of the negro. According to the speaker's observation, they had received these with demonstrations of rejoicing and with a degree of heartiness that in- dicates true sincerity of heart and not lip service. "You hear much which is true," added the speaker, "about the immorality of the black people. I ask you when you hear about viciousness and viciousness to remember that in our country we have all sorts of people. We have a large section of the community un- touched practically by religious ef- fort of any denomination, and yet out of this section you may gather abundant specimens of the qualities you would like to find in any country."

The president then announced the standing committees as follows:

Dr. Moore, of West

Virginia; the president of the house, ex-officio.

Many Changes.
The president called attention to the remarkable changes which had taken place in the personnel of the body, either by reason of death or non-elec- tion.

While the president was naming the committee to represent the lower house at the exercises at Bruton Church, a clerical delegate from Springfield interrupted to open again the much-discussed question as to who should represent the various thirteen colonies.

The president declined to listen to the delegate, saying that he under- stood the invitation and the resolution and knew perfectly the thirteen origi- nal colonies. If he made a mistake on that point, he said, he would be glad to be corrected.

To Reduce Number.
Dr. Huntington, of New York, offered a resolution for the New York dele- gation, the purpose of which is to re- duce the number of delegates to the House of Deputies. The house is not to be composed of more than 300 de- puties and these shall be apportioned according to the number of clergy hav- ing charges within the respective dioc- eses.

Mr. Thomas, of Pennsylvania, moved that Monday, October 7th, be set aside for the discussion of Sunday school in- struction.

Minnesota presented a memorial from the newly organized Diocese of Duluth and asked that the diocese be admitted to the General Convention.

Mr. Thomas, of Massachusetts, pre- sented a memorial on a change of the prayer book.

A deputy from Honolulu asked for a change of name.

A deputy from Cuba asked that the canons of the church be translated into Spanish and created a laugh when he asked that his motion be referred to the committee on expenses.

A deputy from Oregon moved to di- vide the Diocese of Oregon.

A deputy from Georgia offered a memorial regarding a change in the prayer book and also to divide the diocese into two sees and to have a uniform parochial system.

Mr. Johns, of Washington, offered a memorial regarding deceased mem- bers.

A deputy from Rhode Island offered a memorial regarding a change in the prayer book.

Action of Negro Bishops.
Mr. Grammer, of Philadelphia, offered a memorial regarding the election of bishops for the colored race.

Rev. Mr. B. P. Lee, of Los Angeles presented a memorial on change of name and permission to use the re- vised version. It is proposed to drop the word "Protestant."

Mr. Packard, of Maryland, spoke for the committee on the revision of rules governing the house, explaining nu- merous changes proposed by the com- mittee. He then asked that the new proposed rules be adopted.

Mr. Saunders, of Southern Virginia, asked that the matter be postponed until the deputies have had opportu- nity to read the proposed rules. He suggested that the matter be taken up on Monday at 11 o'clock.

Mr. Stetson, of New York, said he agreed with both gentlemen, but he urged that Mr. Packard's motion be carried, for he felt sure there was meant nothing revolutionary.

Declined to Recognize Him.
Mr. Saunders again arose. The presi- dent declined to recognize him. Mr. Saunders continued to speak. The president requested him to be seated. Mr. Saunders contended that he had the floor. Mr. Baker, of Pennsylvania, insisted that the president was the gov- erning authority and that Mr. Saunders was not in order. "It will give way to any one who desires to speak," said Mr. Saunders. "Then sit down," said Mr. Baker.

Mr. Saunders continued, and the president interrupted him, saying: "The deputy from Southern Virginia will please take his seat."

"Am I not recognized," inquired Mr. Saunders.

"You are not," replied the president. "The president inquired if there was any other deputy who desired to speak on the subject."

Mr. Stoneberger spoke in support of Mr. Saunders, as did Dr. Grammer, who said that Mr. Saunders was in order. "Do you desire to appeal from the ruling of the chair?" asked the presi- dent.

"I do not, but I ask if Mr. Saunders is not in order," replied the presi- dent, "and my remarks to him were in the nature of a request."

Mr. Saunders then continued his re- marks, after which Dr. Packard said that Mr. Saunders' amendment was agreeable to him. There were cries of "No, no," and a veto was taken. The president was unable to decide, and the delegates arose and were counted. The president then announced the vote as follows: for the Saunders resolution, 277; against it, 155.

The matter of the adoption of the proposed new rules will therefore be taken up on Monday at 11 o'clock.

The Next Meeting.
The president then announced the committee of five, who, with five bishops, will suggest the place of meet- ing of the next General Convention: Mr. J. P. Morgan, New York; the Rev. Dr. Battershall, Albany; the Rev. Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady, Mr. Wiggins, Tenn.; the Rev. Dr. Bennett, of New- ark.

The Rev. Dr. Harding, of Washing- ton, offered a resolution touching the need of a missionary hymn-book, and spoke earnestly on the subject.

He urged that a book of hymns for this work be selected of a less classi- cal nature than those contained in the regular hymnal—a book to be used in parochial work and rescue missions. The request was that the matter be referred to a committee, composed of two bishops, four clergymen and three laymen.

Mr. Brady opposed the resolution, saying that such a book of hymns would do away with the authorized hymnal of the church.

The motion was carried by an over- whelming majority.

Bishop of London Speaks.
The house then arose to receive the Lord Bishop of London, the Lord Bish- op of St. Albans and Bishop Mont- gomery as well as the committee from the House of Bishops.

Rev. Dr. Crawford, of Virginia, in- troduced the prelates to the presi- dent, who welcomed them in a brief speech, alluding to the origin of the American church and to the civiliza- tion of America, which, he said, came from England. He alluded to the sermon preached at the preceding day by the Lord Bishop of London at Holy Trinity Church.

To each of the lord bishops the president gave a separate welcome, al- luding pleasantly to some especial trait of character which endeared each to the people of America.

The Lord Bishop of London was first presented to the convention by Dr. McKim. He made a hit with the de- puties at the very beginning of his ad- dress by saying that he was going to be frank and say something which he had not said since he had been in America, because he had felt before that it was indelicate. However, he said, since Dr. McKim had spoken of the early days of the church, he felt no hesitancy in longer keeping silent, and would speak of the American church as the daughter of the English church, and not as a younger sister, as he had done at Holy Trinity. "I was not so rash yesterday," the bishop re- marked with a merry twinkle in his eye, "but I now feel that I can be per- fectly frank." He was a trifle hoarse as he began his remarks, and apologized for the Saunders resolution, 277; against it, 155.

The matter of the adoption of the proposed new rules will therefore be taken up on Monday at 11 o'clock.

DEPUTIES SPEND BUSY DAY AND DISCUSS MANY MATTERS

Hear Addresses by Archbishop of West Indies, Bishop of London and Other Noted Prelates. Some Very Lively Debates.

The session of the House of Deputies opened promptly at 10 o'clock, with prayer by the president, Dr. Randolph H. McKim.

At 10 o'clock the bishops and dele- gates, clerical and lay, assembled for morning prayer at St. James Church, where Bishop Cameron Mann, of North Dakota, officiated, assisted by Dr. Hart.

Prayer was moved and carried that roll- call be dispensed with during the re- mainder of the convention.

Rev. Dr. Henry Austice, the secre- tary, then read the minutes of the previous day, and the president an- nounced the committee to receive the English bishops.

A discussion then followed as to the proper manner to address the Presi- dent of the United States. A delegate objected to the term "His Excellency," but Dr. McKim declined to be cor- rected. At this point His Grace, the Archbishop of the West Indies, entered the hall, escorted by Rev. Dr. Pen- tinger and the Rev. Dr. Evans. The delegates, all standing, received the eminent prelate, and the president, in a most happy speech, welcomed him to the lower house. Dr. McKim, in in- troducing the archbishop, the Archbishop of the West Indies, expressed a sense of intense satisfaction at having the fa- mous man in Richmond. Turning to the archbishop, he said: "We have fol- lowed your labors in the West Indies. We have noted your splendid work- ing in a time of great calamity, your hand has been extended to help and succor the unhappy of your island. You have endeavored yourself to us. We are glad to call you father in love."

Archbishop Speaks.
Deeply touched by the words of the president, the Most Rev. Dr. Nuttall replied:

"I count it a great privilege to be presented to you today by your pres- ident whom I have known and loved many years. And I thank you for your cordial welcome to me on behalf of this large representative body of churchmen, clerical and lay. It is my habit to follow, by careful study of two church weeklies and one secu- lar paper, all that is projected, re- ported and done in America of im- portance, and especially that which concerns our church here. I say our church; I cannot think of the Amer- ican church and the English church as two churches. I think of them as
